The project was funded largely by a grant from the Delmar Foundation, with additional support from local businesses. — [1] —. Library director Paul Hennessy said the idea came from teenagers who attended a robotics program at the library last year. "They kept asking where they could keep building things after the program ended," he said.

Anyone with a library card may use the makerspace, but first-time users must complete a 30-minute safety orientation. — [2] —. Orientations are held every Tuesday and Thursday evening. Materials such as fabric and printer filament are provided at cost.

Greta Olsen (11:02 A.M.)
The venue for the sales conference just told me the main ballroom has been double-booked on March 12.

Victor Hale (11:03 A.M.)
Seriously? We sent the deposit in December.

Greta Olsen (11:04 A.M.)
They've apologized. They can offer us the Lakeview Room instead, but it only holds 180 people.

Nina Park (11:06 A.M.)
We have 210 registered so far, and registration is open until the end of the month.

Victor Hale (11:07 A.M.)
What about moving the conference to the following week?

Greta Olsen (11:08 A.M.)
The ballroom is free on March 19, but our keynote speaker is only available on the 12th.

Nina Park (11:10 A.M.)
Then we'd lose our biggest draw.

Victor Hale (11:11 A.M.)
Could we use the Lakeview Room and stream the keynote to the lobby?

Greta Olsen (11:13 A.M.)
I'll ask the venue whether that's possible and whether they'll reduce the rental fee.
