City Opens Rooftop Farm on Library Roof

By Daniel Osei

NORTHVALE (July 7)—Residents of Northvale can now grow their own vegetables on top of the Central Public Library. The 600-square-meter rooftop farm, which opened last Saturday, includes 80 garden plots that residents can rent for $25 per season.

The project was proposed two years ago by a group of local volunteers. It was funded by a grant from the state's Department of Agriculture and donations from several businesses.

"Many people in the downtown area live in apartments without yards," said volunteer coordinator Maria Lopes. "This gives them a place to garden."
